Abstract: The present paper aspires to attract interest on the way in which Swedish people surprised the entire world with their original vision, combining business liberalism with state interventions and thus building an advanced economy. From a formal poor country which was also a constant candidate to emigration, during the last century, Sweden has become one of the technological powers of the world and has also successfully managed to maintain social equality and peace.

The paper aims to convince that this evolution was possible under favorable external conditions, in the culture wrought by nature and with a relatively calm historic background history, generally safe from major conflicts.

We will present the strategies, the economical policies and the management methods specific to this culture but also the catalysts of economic and social development.

Keywords: providential state, „a feminine culture”, egalitarian spirit, democratic values, tolerating ambiguities, „slow attitude”, ability to delegate, „monochronic time” culture, individualist values, harmony with nature, „law context” culture, supportive salaries, consensual approach, participatory management, congestion, „semi-independent” teams.
