Abstract: The developed societies in the world are facing, lately, labor shortages and poor qualification, which is why this problem is considered a priority within each State.

Investing in human resources, creating new jobs by awarding grants to the disadvantaged groups, especially to young people facing the issue of the lack of experience at work, is a strategy proposed by the experts in the labor market, in U.S. and The European Union.

Keywords: employment, human resource, job, labor market, grants.
